Nov. 22.—"Good-bye God will take care of me," wrote a young woman whose berth aboard the Old Dominion liner Princess Anne was this morning discovered to have been uncocupled after she took passage from New York for Norfolk yesterday, and who has never been seen since. On the paper in which she apparently bade farewell to her father and to life, was also written a request that her father, Mr. F. J. Henkel, be notified at No. 48 Crescent Street Wakefield, Mass. Search was instituted this morning for the girl, and in the stateroom, which she had hired, but in which she had never gone to bed, it appeared, was found her

ARRESTED FOR SHOPLIFTING. ARRESTED FOR SHOPLIFTING.
Friends of Mrs. Alice M. Willard, of this city, were shocked to hear of her arrest in St. Louis on the charge of shoplifting. Mrs. Willard, who is the wife of Dr. W. D. Willard, an osteopath, with offices in the Haddington husband in his practice and has always borne an excellent reputation. Her friends hesitated at first to believe the accusations made against her, and they

Mrs. Willard had been in St. Louis on a visit. Saturday night her husband received a telegram saying that his wife was very ill, and asking him to go to St. Louis at once. He left immediately and is expected to arrive there this afternoon. Unless he sees the account of the affair in the newspapers he will be unaware of the nature of his wife's "illness" until his arrival. The Doctor has been in very bad health, and several times last summer was not expected to recover. His friends have great fears of the effect of this shock upon him.

A special dispatch from St. Louis states that Mrs. Willard was arrested in a department store Saturday night by the house detective and handed over to the police, charged with shoplifting. She protested her innocence, but when searched at the station house twenty-five lace collars, a lace spread and a silk waist were found conceased upon the folds of a large cloak which she wore. Then she confessed her sullt, and broke down so completely that the police sent her to a hospital. In admitting the thett she said that she had a manla for committing such acts and that she could not rosist it. A special dispatch from St. Louis states

The police searched the woman's room at No. 2616 Tenth Street, and there found enough goods hidden away to load a wagon. In the collection were pillow cases, table covers, silk vells, kid gloves, fur collars, fur boas, fur muffs, two neck furs, vases, two bolts of dress goods, silk handkerchiefs, strings of bends, four breastpins, a diamond'sunburst, two Masonic emblem pins, three gold World's Fair souvenir coins, silk goods, gentlemen's necktles and gentlemen's gloves. light and the air; that they were aware that it was asking a good deal of him to cramp the building out of which he intended to make his livelihood, but that they hoped he would do it because of their need. After a good deal of thought Mr. Downey came to the conclusion that he ought to grant the request and so he notified them that he would change his plans, make a somewhat smaller building and sell them the six feet of land in the strip adjoining their church. After a little while the preacher came around with the trustees of his church and said that they very much appreciated Mr. Downey's courtesy, and were sorry they had bothered him as they had, because, on looking into the affairs of the church, they found that as they were already in debt they did not feel warranted in incurring any further financial obligation, and so they had to we hadraw their request. They thanked him for his kindly purpose and said good-bye. But Mr. Downey on the could not get to sleep that night until finally he made up his mind that as they could not buy it he would give it to them anyway: (appeause), which he did. But, unfortunately, we know that the tower of Siloam often falls upon the just and the unjust ailke, and Mr. Downey's livery stable caught fire and burned down. It was Sunday morning and the Baptist church was in session next door to him, and the clergyman stopped and said:

"Now you women stay here and pray, and you men so straight out and help our benefactor, Mr. Downey, "and go out they did, and get his horses all out, so that none of them were burned, although he suffered otherwise a total loss. Now I call-that a practical application of Mr. Wagner's teaching. Here in Washington we have a right to be proud of a citizen like Mr. Downey; and if only we can develop enough such citizens we shall turn out just the kind of community that does not need to, but will always be glad to study "the simple life," the author of which I now introduce to you." (Applause).

at the college chapel to-night, conducted under the auspices of Mr. and Mrs. Conway Gordon, was a pronounced success from a musical standpoint. The bad weather kept the house from being filled but a very appreciative audience greeted the Gordons, as well as their special musical frienda, who assisted in the programme. Miss Grace Greenwood, of Richmond, charmed the audience with her sweet voice, both as soloist and in quartette. Miss Myride Redford, formerly of Ashland, but now of Richmond, seemed to enjoy particularly the opportunity she had as accompanist in using a brandnew plano, which had been built to order for the new Bijou in Richmond, and was loaned for this occasion. Mr. Seldon School, in Richmond, had been called in at a late hour to fill the place made vacant by the absence of Miss Francis

NEWPORT NEWS, VA., Nov. 22.—Hysterical cries of a child attracted a crowd to a negro dwelling on Warwick Avenue his morning, and when the door of the house had been broken in, a pretty little white boy, in underlothes, was found within. The child was only about three years old, and from his incoherent cries the police officers who had been called to the scene could gain no information. It was learned that Lucy Howard, a nogrowoman, occupied the house, and investigation revealed the fact that she was in he police station, charged with being drunk.

When questioned the negress said that the baby had been intrusted to her care last night by its 35 Forty-second Street. The mother, said the negress, went out to spend the ovening with a woman named to the child for the night. After taking no the hold for the night. After taking no her own hook, and landed behind the night alone in the house, and was on the verge of convulsions when discovered this neorning.

Upon hearing the story, Sergent B, J. O'Hara sent the paired wagon to North Thed and had Mrs. Leonard and the Police Court this morning and the mother was given a sover reprimand by Justice Brown. It is likely that the police will make an effort to have the child steen as or phant asy.
